Synopsis

DIE FLEDERMAUS

Act I

Eisenstein is to go to prison for a week for contempt of court. Falke (called The Bat as the result of a trick played on him by Eisenstein) resolves to have revenge : to persuade Eisenstein to attend a ball at Orlofsky's palace and to get Rosalinda to the ball so that she may see her husband's flirtations. Rosalinda sees her husband off to prison, so she thinks, and presently receives her admirer Alfred. Frank, the prison governor arrives to collect Eisenstein for prison : Alfred is persuaded to save Rosalinda's reputation by allowing himself to be arrested.

Act II

The ball at Orlofsky's palace, that evening. Rosalinda disguised as a Hungarian Countess, has arrived with Falke; and now watches her husband flirting with her maid, Adele, dressed in one of Rosalinda's gowns. Eisenstein transfers his attention to the "Countess" who manages to secure his watch.

Act III

Eisenstein goes to prison to give himself up. He is amazed to find himself already there in the person of Alfred, and furious to discover his wife's love affair. Rosalinda confronts him with his watch and describes his behaviour with Adele. There is nothing to do but forgive and forget.

Ah—that's Bass!

Since we began brewing it here in Ireland Bass Ale has won the hearty approval of beer drinkers. Right from the start it's been an all-round success with Bass on Draught leading the way for two famous Bass products in bottle: first, Bass Export Ale, and now—bottled Bass Ale with the bright red label.

And its popularity continues to soar as more and more beer drinkers join the Bass experts and enjoy the mature flavour of this great Irish brewed ale.

Have a Bass yourself and you'll understand why it's such a big success.
